IN GOOD HANDS

M. Vincent Makhoulouf, MD, F.A.C.S.
Hand Surgeon, Chicago & Des Plaines

August 2015

Luckily for the patient and the surgeon hand tumors very rarely malignant.

The most common masses in the hands are ganglions, cysts, giant cell tumors, and lipomas.

Case #1: Giant cell tumor

It was removed under loupe magnification to ensure complete excision and avoid recurrence.

Case #2: Lipoma

Case #3: Enchondroma

An enchondroma is a tumor of cartilage origin. Some believe that it is an embryonic vestigial cartilage that is left inside the bone and continues on growing.

In this x-ray the enchondroma has caused a pathologic fracture.

Case #4: Carpal Boss

A carpal boss is a mass that is distal to the usual location of the dorsal wrist ganglion (green arrow). It originates from a vestigial bone. Bony spurs appear from the Trapezoid, Capitate and the index and middle fingers metacarpals. Because the spurs are devoid of cartilage friction results in pain.
